

Americans Outflank Nazi Positions Russians Capture Key Railroad Junction of Fastov

May Trap Great Nazi Army in Latest Drive

Swift Advance Nets Reds Many Prisoners

By JUDSON O'QUINN
LONDON, Nov. 7 (AP)—Russian troops moving toward the Rumanian border in an effort to trap hundreds of thousands of battered Germans anchored between the Dnieper river and the Black sea yesterday captured the key rail junction of Fastov, thirty-five miles southwest of Kiev.

The capture cut the main rail link connecting the German forces in the Northern Ukraine with those battling against developing disaster at Krivoy Rog, 210 miles to the south-east.

Nazi Airmen Captured

So swift was the Russian breakthrough beyond Kiev, carried out on the twenty-sixth anniversary of the Soviet revolution, that German airmen were nabbed before they could get their planes off the ground, and whole trainloads of Nazi equipment were seized, Moscow said.

Seventy towns and hamlets were reported swept up by Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's tank and infantry units, advancing at a mile-an-hour clip toward the Rumanian border, 150 miles to the southwest.

Eighteen miles northwest of the Ukraine capital the Russians plunged on through Nemysheva on the rail route to Korosten, hacking the Germans to pieces and steadily pressing them back toward the Pripyet marshes.

German Losses Heavy

Huge losses were inflicted on the Germans, said a midnight communiqué supplement recorded by the Soviet monitor from a Moscow broadcast, and a large number of prisoners were taken.

German broadcasts admitted Nazi withdrawals under the impact of "superior forces."

Soviet Stormovik fighters laid down a murderous fire on retreating Axis troops whose failure to make a successful stand imperiled huge German forces in the Krivoy Rog-Nikopol-Nikolov triangle in the Dnieper bend.

Kill 1,000 Germans

In the Crimea, the Russians declared they beat down German counter-attacks on their bridgeheads near Kerch at the eastern end of the peninsula, killing 1,000 of the enemy northeast of Kerch.

On the north central front, where the Russians were within forty-five miles of the Latvian and old Polish borders, the communiqué said the Germans were "losing one position after another" west and southwest of Nevel.

Four hundred Germans were killed in that theater during the day, and six localities seized.

The Russian smash southwest of Kiev forced the Germans "to take up new lines," one Berlin broadcast said. It added that the Russians were using more than 250,000 troops in that single area.

Stirring victory scenes were enacted in Moscow when Marshal Stalin announced the fall of Fastov on the twenty-sixth anniversary of the Soviet revolution.

Happy Day For Reds

It was the happiest day in the Soviet Union since Germany launched her invasion June 22, 1941. There were smiles, handshakes, and congratulations among Russians, Britons, and Americans in Moscow's busy streets where large crowds gathered in holiday mood.

In his order of the day Marshal Stalin termed captured Fastov an "operational and defense center of the Germans in the southwestern direction," and said the main railway lines "connecting the Kiev German groupings with the Krivoy Rog German grouping have been cut."

Twelve artillery batteries from 124 tanks in Moscow boomed a night salute to the troops taking the vital junction. The units seizing Fastov (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

GERMAN IDEA OF A JOKE

DURING THE NAZI OCCUPATION of Naples, two youngsters became "playful" with the results shown above — two youngsters crippled for life. They were working in a field with their parents when the soldiers beckoned. As they approached, the Germans tossed what the boys thought was a present. It was a hand grenade which burst between them, injuring their legs so that amputation was necessary.

Hands Off Maryland:

O'Connor Refuses To Heed W.L.B. Ruling on State Wage Increases

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 7 (AP)—The state administration will not comply with a War Labor Board ruling requiring that certain wage increases of state employees be approved by the federal agency, Governor O'Connor announced today.

"Maryland does not recognize the right of the federal government to fix wages or salaries for state employees," the governor said, adding that the stand was taken after the board of public works affirmed a protest on the matter made to the WLB by Attorney General William C. Walsh.

The board ruling provided that "increases in wages, made to comply with minimum wage specifications fixed by state and local agencies in connection with public projects, be submitted to the board for approval."

Walsh wrote the board's regional attorney that "it is my understanding that, at a conference held by a committee of attorneys general with Director James Byrnes of the WLB last December, it was agreed that the federal government would not attempt to exercise any control over the officials and employees of the state and local government units."

O'Connor said the WLB had also declared that "it is believed that state and local governmental agencies will understand and appreciate the wisdom and necessity of this type of co-operation between the states, local and federal agencies concerned in this common problem."

The governor stated that "this action by the board of public works and Attorney General Walsh is possibly the first time the controversial question of states' rights has been brought before Maryland's top administrative body, although the policy affirmed has been put forth repeatedly in past administrations."

Germans Insist Allied Plane Bombed Vatican Vicinity

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 7 (AP)—The Stockholm-Tidningen Rome correspondent in a dispatch passed through German censorship said today that residents of Rome were convinced the Friday night bombing of Vatican City was "no accident."

This dispatch said a plane came low over the city, circled many times over the Vatican, and then dropped four bombs on a line between the observatory and the railway station. The station was hit.

One bomb exploded about 100 yards from St. Peter's, shattering windows on one side of the church, the correspondent said, and windows also were broken at Santa Maria palace where Allied diplomats accredited to the Vatican live.

Crowds of people flocked to St. Peter's Square after the bombing, calling for the Pope to make several appearances on the balcony, the dispatch added.

Heavily Armed Troops Keep Japs From Uprising at Tule Lake, Cal.

TULE LAKE, Calif., Nov. 7 (AP)—the administration area of the Japanese armed troops, some of them veterans of Pacific battle fronts, kept watchful eyes on 16,000 Japanese internees as the Tule Lake segregation center today, while the first of several investigations got under way to determine the cause and possible cure of repeated uprisings there.

The army retained full control, but administrative work at the center still was carried on by the War Relocation Authority which Thursday night called in the troops when a Caucasian guard was beaten and around 500 Japanese invaded the administration area of the project. Twenty Japanese armed with clubs and knives were taken into custody and some of them were injured.

An investigator for the Congressional Dies committee met today at the center with Lt. Col. Verne Austin, commander of the troops, and representatives of the WRA.

In the meantime, members of the state Senate committee on Japanese resettlement arrived for hearings to start tomorrow, and Rep. Claire Engle, Democratic congressman representing this district, was en route by plane from Washington.

Heavy Japanese Cruiser Hit in Raid on Rabaul

Enemy Preparing For Sea Battle

By C. YATES MCDANIEL
SOUTHWEST PACIFIC HEADQUARTERS, Monday, Nov. 8 (AP)—A probable torpedo hit on a heavy Japanese cruiser at Rabaul and night bombing attacks on a light cruiser and destroyer tender in New Ireland waters with unknown result were announced today as Japanese shipping kept moving into this area for a showdown battle.

Australian-flown Beauforts scored the probable strike and at the same time destroyed a cargo vessel in Friday evening operations against Simpson harbor at Rabaul, Japan's key New Britain base.

Damage Several Ships

Mitchell bombers from Admiral Halsey's thirteenth airforce swept the southern coast of Bougainville, sinking or damaging three small coastal vessels and numerous barges.

Land, sea and air operations were the lightest since the spurred drive to take the Northern Solomons began on Nov. 1.

A spokesman said ground operations on Bougainville and Choiseul islands apparently were proceeding according to plan. Marines who landed on the west central coast of Bougainville on Nov. 1 were reported three days ago to be consolidating their positions and mopping up enemy units on offshore islets after securing their beachhead.

No Official Reports

Nothing official has been heard from American army units on Choiseul since Nov. 3 when they were reported driving the enemy from one position four miles from the original landing point.

There has been no indication that the Japanese have attempted to reinforce their comparatively weak force at Choiseul, and so far sailing at Bougainville has made no serious effort to challenge the marines held on the Empress Augusta bay shore.

Labor Troubles Far from Ended

Groups Bringing Strong Pressure

By JOHN H. WIGGINS
WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (AP)—Mounting pressure from labor organizations for a loosening of wage controls lent new stringency to the nation's increasing economic problems today.

With President Roosevelt's labor-industry-public board ready to open an investigation tomorrow into the wartime cost of living, the economic picture presented these principal facets:

See Break in Program

1. The United States Chamber of Commerce interpreted the pay raise just granted coal miners as the probable entering wedge of a break in the stabilization program.

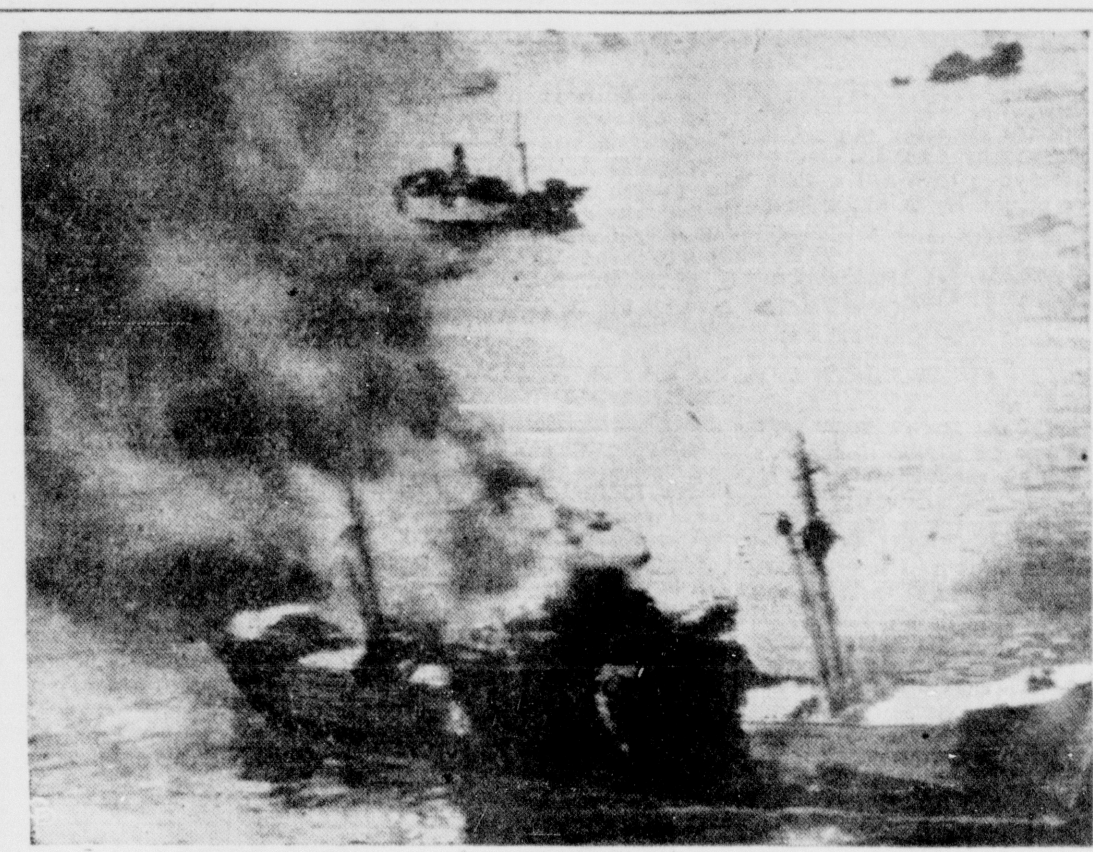

2. With striking coal miners expected to return to work under a higher-pay agreement, steel workers were reported determined to seek a fifteen-cent an hour pay increase.

3. Chairman William H. Davis of the War Labor Board told Congress that present wage controls are forcing workers to pay dearer for the anti-inflation program than "other segments" of society.

4. Congressional foes and advocates of subsidies to keep down retail food prices—payments the administration claims are necessary to stave off inflation—continued in indecisive battle.

5. While a strike vote was being conducted among more than 1,100,000 rail employees, a special presidential board prepared to submit by Nov. 15 a report on (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

JAPANESE MERCHANTMEN are enveloped in smoke in the wake of a heavy raid by American bombers on the important base at Rabaul last Tuesday. Gen. MacArthur's airmen destroyed or damaged twenty-six ships, including five warships, and blasted 108 planes. Truce Probable In Subsidy Fight

Both Sides Dodge Test of Strength

By ALEX H. SINGLETON
WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (AP)—A war-on-the-nerve battle over the administration's subsidy program to hold down food prices gripped Congress today with the signs pointing to a truce.

Two weeks after a measure to outlaw all subsidies after the first of next year emerged from the House Banking committee, neither side appears ready for an immediate test of strength.

Parallels Former Situation

The situation closely parallels that of five months ago when the administration won the first round by vetoing a similar restriction and gaining extension of the subsidy program until the end of this year.

Just as it was earlier in the year the subsidy issue was tackled once a measure to extend the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation which finances some of the administration's programs to assure farmers a price for their products above the ceiling erected by the Office of Price Administration.

Rep. Crawford (R-Mich) contended that the delay in bringing the bill to the House floor for action developed because both sides were "strategizing."

He interpreted the Republican election victory in Kentucky as proof that "the people in the country districts don't want subsidies and showed it—the election Tuesday was a terrific wallop for the administration."

Administration Strategy

Simultaneously, he said that the administration is waging a vigorous war to maintain the subsidy program (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Extra! 56 Allied Warships Sunk by Japs, Says Tokyo

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (AP)—The Tokyo radio declared in a broadcast recorded by NBC tonight that more than fifty-six Allied warships had been sunk and seventy-eight damaged from Oct. 31 to Nov. 5, in the "battle of Bougainville island."

This enemy claim was without confirmation. The Tokyo station also repeated for the third straight night its assertion that two Allied aircraft carriers, two heavy cruisers and two destroyers were sunk in the engagement.

Germany Reports Deaths of Many Thousands of Yanks and British

LONDON, Nov. 7 (AP)—The German radio announced today that the Nazi air force had bombed twenty-two fully loaded Allied troop transports, escorted by eight destroyers, off the North African coast.

The radio, quoting a DNB announcement from Adolf Hitler's headquarters, said "numerous bombs and torpedoes hit thirteen large passenger vessels totaling 140,000 tons and two destroyers with destructive effect."

The report was without confirmation from Allied authorities. Returning fliers were quoted as saying that several transports were seen burning and in sinking condition and "many thousands of young American and British reserve troops went down with the ships."

All Out for Bougainville:

MacArthur and Halsey Positive Of Early Capture of Key Island

By HAROLD STREETER
Associated Press Staff Writer
The MacArthur-Halsey battering-ram lunge at Bougainville to flatten the last door to Rabaul along the hallway of Solomons islands has the happy aspect for Americans of being a struggle whose outcome already has been indicated by its directions.

They virtually have foretold a star spangled verdict during the opening stages. Yet today, United States marines hold only one beachhead at Empress Augusta Bay; Japanese still have not given up trying to restore Bougainville's bombed out airfields, and, undismayed by a decisive defeat in the first naval battle, the enemy is rushing cruisers and destroyers from Truk into the fighting zone.

Challenges Jap Fleet

General MacArthur sounded the starter's gun for this current operation by saying, "If the Jap fleet comes out, we will welcome it."

That is unusually strong language for a general who saw at Batavia how tenacious the enemy can be and consequently would not yield even now to unwarranted optimism. MacArthur can only mean he knows he has back of him the means to extend Nippon's navy a decidedly hot reception.

But Adm. William F. Halsey made it even stronger. "This is the flexing springboard for the longer jumps ahead," he said.

Halsey Optimistic

And when the admiral followed up that with robust talk of "ability to hit harder, faster, more often and in more places than the enemy... dared think possible," he was saying the battle for Bougainville is going to be won.

Some recent events help explain this undisguised confidence and one of the chief developments has been the forceful entry of the United States navy.

Back when the first Solomon door was being stormed at Guadalcanal, there was a naval reversal which ranked Japanese units, dashing down at night, sank three American cruisers and an Australian cruiser in the battle of Savo Island. That blow was followed by audacious shelling by hit-and-run enemy destroyers of the marines' positions and men from the fighting zones generally agree there is nothing quite so terrifying as an offshore naval bombardment. Nor as devastating.

Japs Miss Their Cue

After the marines landed last Monday on Bougainville, the Japanese navy prepared a repeat performance of the battle of Savo. But it missed its cue. The Jap force was decimated and routed 40 miles from a bridgehead which has yet to undergo enemy naval shelling.

In all the swift series of happenings, none was more bold than the movement of a United States navy task force the entire length of Bougainville's more than 100 miles of coast to bombard enemy airfields on Buka. That force stood more than 300 miles from the nearest protective Allied air base in the Central Solomons and within less than 50 miles of Japan's Rabaul base.

Neither Rabaul's five airfields nor its big naval anchorage, both unmercifully pounded by MacArthur's bombers, did anything to deter the task force.

Powerful Thunderbolt fighters flew tight protection for the bombers all the way to the target and back, about 700 miles, and fliers who are veterans of twenty-five raids said they didn't see a single German plane and that anti-aircraft fire was intermittent and light.

British Advancing

A British offensive to the east smashed forward as deep as five miles, reeling the Germans back from their Trigne line, as Allied warriors captured fifty-two towns and villages in a blazing climax to a year of war since the Allied landings in French North Africa.

Fighting desperately, the Germans threw still another division—the Ninety-fourth infantry—against the Fifth army. Nine Nazi divisions now are pitted against the Allies, six of them engaging the Fifth army.

Galluccio, three miles southwest of Mignano, was captured as Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's soldiers surged forward to take heights rising to 3,500 feet on both sides of Mignano.

These victories raised the possibility of by-passing Mignano completely for a sweep up the Via Cassina along the broad valley leading to Cassino and Rome, in a drive outflanking the Anurini mountain range on which the Nazis intended to establish the west coast anchor of a new defense line.

Cross Garigliano River

Nearer the west coast, British Fifth army patrols crossed the Garigliano river at least at one point.

The Eighth army, beating back a series of sharp, tank-spearheaded enemy counterthrusts, hammered out gains up to five miles in sectors near the Adriatic coast for a total advance of ten miles in three days.

A general attack drove the Germans back from the Trigne river along a sixteen-mile front inland from the Adriatic, and the few remaining Nazi strongpoints near the Trigne's headwaters were left untenable.

Allied planes ranged wide yesterday. United States Warhawks pounced on a concentration of 200 German war vehicles parked at Metkovic on the coast of Yugoslavia, destroying forty and damaging fifty more, and other fleets ripped up enemy tanks, motor vehicles, and trains in Italy in an exceptionally successful series of operations.

Yanks in Tough Battle

The heaviest fighting around was met by American doughboys driving north and west into the mountains from Venafr. There the Nazi command threw in reinforcements in a furious effort to retain the heights dominating the main inland highway to Rome—the Via Cassina—running through the narrow mountain gap at Migor for at least 1,800 workers.

Fortresses Raid Germany, Escape Without Loss of a Single Bomber

By GLADWIN HILL
LONDON, Nov. 7 (AP)—American Flying Fortresses today raided Germany for the third time in five days, bombing Duren, site of important airplane parts and light metals plants, and other targets with practically no opposition and without losing a single bomber.

It was the Americans' second blow in two weeks at Duren, twenty-five miles southwest of Cologne and 150 miles southwest of Munster, where American heavies hit on Friday.

Surprise Attack Drives Foe Back In Major Action

52 Towns Captured By Allied Forces

By NOLAND NORGAARD
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, ALGIERS, Nov. 7 (AP)—American troops in brilliant mountain fighting which surprised the Germans have seized dominating heights outflanking strategic Mignano in Italy, headquarters announced today, winning positions for a plunge up a broad valley to by-pass the Nazis' powerful new Anurini mountain strongholds.

(Indicating a deep and rapid Allied penetration in the central part of the battlefield, DNB in a Berlin broadcast said the Germans had abandoned Agnone, Carovilli, and Forli, all in a wedge-shaped territory sixteen miles deep north and northeast of Isernia. The Germans appeared to be falling back rapidly all along the eastern end of the front.)

Liberty Ship To Be Launched Every Day This Week

BALTIMORE, Nov. 7 (AP)—The Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyard will launch a Liberty ship every day this week as operations approach normalcy after the recent crane operators' work stoppage, yard officials announced tonight.

The first ship, the S.S. Edward Bruce, named for the New York-born painter who organized the Public Works Administration's art projects, will be christened tomorrow by Bruce's widow, Mrs. Bruce, who lives at Arlington, Va.

"The yard will soon be back in full stride in the production of Liberty ships," J. M. Willis, vice-president and general manager, said. "Although at least three launchings scheduled for October were postponed, the Fairfield yard broke the East coast record last month with a total number of launchings of twenty ships and the delivery of twenty-two Liberty vessels."

14 Convicts Bolt Georgia Prison Camp

DOUGLAS, Ga., Nov. 7 (AP)—Fourteen convicts, most of them long termers, raided the arsenal of the state prison camp near here this afternoon and escaped, after wounding two guards who sought to stop them.

Harden C. H. Shaw identified the ringleader of the convicts as "Wild Bill" Byrd, long termer from Atlanta, who was serving as a trustee.

The warden said the break apparently was well planned. As the convicts started out, one of them covered a guard and ordered him to drop his gun. Instead the guard fired and the convict returned the shot, striking the guard in the face, wounding him seriously.

A second guard rushing to his assistance was wounded by the convicts who commandeered a state truck and fled.

Americans and RAF Bomb Japs in Burma

NEW DELHI, Nov. 7 (AP)—American and RAF diversbombers, giving tactical support to American and Chinese engineers carving a new "Burma Road," struck at Japanese bases and communications in the Hukawng valley and upper Chinindwin area of Burma yesterday and last night.

The American planes left supply dumps and buildings blazing from Shadup to Kamang, and the supply base of Shadup itself was attacked by another formation which left enemy-occupied buildings ablaze, a United States headquarters communique announced.

RAF diversbombers returned to the attack last night, bombing and strafing targets in the upper Chinindwin area.

The American announcement said only that Liberators and Mitchells were over the area, but the British said they placed many bombs within the city itself and started several fires.

British Army Captain Gets Seven Years

LONDON, Nov. 7 (AP)—A British army captain, who admitted at a court martial that he gave highly secret information to a former leader of the Communist party of Great Britain, has been sentenced to seven years imprisonment.

In announcing the sentence today, the war office said that acting Capt. Ormond Layton Uren had communicated to Douglas F. Springhall, former national organizer of the Communist party, "information of a highly secret character which x x x was calculated to be or might be directly or indirectly useful to an enemy."

Steel Unions Seek Wage Boost Today

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7 (AP)—The executive board of the CIO United Steel Workers of America (USW) meets here tomorrow, apparently determined to press for a wage increase above the "little steel" ceiling it helped establish in July, 1942.

Allan Haywood, the CIO's national organization director and one of the officers who remained in Philadelphia after the CIO convention last week, said he believed "all unions of the CIO will be demanding lifting of the little steel formula and increased wages in the near future."

Vatican City Not Bombed by Allies

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, ALGIERS, Nov. 7 (AP)—Allied headquarters announced today that a thorough investigation showed that Vatican City was not bombed by the Allies Friday night.

The flat denial of German propaganda claims that the Allies were responsible for the violation of Vatican territory followed an earlier statement that headquarters had no knowledge of the bombing.

Cardinal Reports Bombing of Vatican

LIMA, PERU, Nov. 7 (AP)—The papal nuncio in Lima has received the following cable from Luigi Cardinal Maglione, papal secretary of state:

"Yesterday, Nov. 5, at 8:10 p. m., a plane after flying over Vatican City several times dropped four bombs on Vatican territory near St. Peter's basilica. Thanks to God there are no victims to be regretted but there is grave material damage."

King Vittorio Seeks Compromise To Stave Off Attempt To Out Him

By WES GALLAGHER
ITALIAN GOVERNMENT HEADQUARTERS IN SOUTHERN ITALY, Nov. 7 (AP)—A patchwork compromise cabinet loomed tonight for Italy as King Vittorio Emanuele apparently staved off an attempt to oust him.

Advancing the theory that a political truce was necessary until the Allied armies reach Rome, the king won a temporary reprieve.

Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio saw the king twice today, along with the duke of Regaurone who administers the royal household.

The best available information from court circles and the Badoglio government foreign ministry spokesman gave this picture of the political situation:

Count Carlo Sforza, former minister, still is determined to stay out of the cabinet while the king is in power, but is not inclined to push his abdication demand until more of Italy is free and other political leaders have had a voice in the affair. He is willing to give month's operations in view of the scale of their raids in the last week.

The American fliers attributed the Luftwaffe's wariness and the absence of a heavy anti-aircraft barrage to their strong escort and a protective overcast along the route which was unfavorable to the enemy but which did not hamper bombing.

In the Wilhelmshaven raid Wednesday, the Germans reported the Americans bombed through clouds, indicating that they might be adopting some of the RAF's night bad weather bombing methods in their daylight work. This could as much as double their already accelerating operations. In only one previous month, September, have the heavies made as many raids in the first week.

Many of the RAF's methods cannot be detailed but the air ministry last week disclosed one tactic which the Americans might use—Pathfinder planes which locate the target and drop a ring of flares over it, through which the bombers can unload regardless of the weather.

fingerprints offered by the crown as proof that de Marigny was in Sir Harry's room at the time of the slaying.

O'Neill's appearance may take a spectacular turn, since the defense has suggested that the fingerprint on exhibit was faked, and actually did not come from a bedspread in the death room as Capt. James O. Barker of the Miami police has testified.

After calling O'Neill, the defense may turn next to the testimony of the Marquis Georges de Videlou, Guimbeau, close friend of de Marigny's, who is expected to support the accused man's alibi.

De Videlou, who occupied an apartment in de Marigny's cottage, possibly may take to the witness stand the maltese cat, "Grisou," which also figures in the attempt to prove that the defendant was at home during the early morning hours when Sir Harry met his death.

De Marigny swore that he drove two dinner guests to their homes near Westbourne about 1:00 a. m. July 8, and returned immediately to his cottage. He said he went to de Videlou's apartment to ask whether the marquis wanted him to take his friend, Betty Roberts, home.

He heard de Videlou and Miss Roberts drive away about 3 a. m., he said. When de Videlou returned, after fifteen minutes, de Marigny testified, he asked his friend to take the cat out of his room because the animal was annoying him.

Miss Roberts, a pretty blond, corroborated yesterday de Marigny's account of going to the marquis' apartment about 1:30 a. m. She also said de Videlou drove her home about 3 a. m.

Labor Troubles

Its investigation of their higher wage demands.

Report in Sixty Days
The living cost investigators, all drawn from the War Labor Board which has jurisdiction over wages, were instructed to report in sixty days. The inquiry followed complaints by union leaders that living costs have mounted faster than wage increases.

Meanwhile, John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers' chief, and Secretary of Interior Ickes, as federal boss of the mines, sought to meet the minor reservations which the UMW made in approving their agreement hiking the daily basic wage of the soft coal miner from $7 to $8.50 but requiring an hour longer work day.

UMW officials said these negotiations would not hinder virtually all miners from returning to the pits tomorrow. Reports from the fields, however, indicated that many are confused and uncertain about the new wage scale.

"From the single view point of granting labor's demands—no matter what the method—the stage may now be set for a retreat from President Roosevelt's hold-the-line anti-inflation order," the United States Chamber of Commerce said in a statement on the coal decision.

The chamber also renewed a protest that a rollback of prices through subsidies would not solve the food problem and advocated coordination of government food activities in a single agency and simplification of price controls.

gram and declared that its strategy would center around placing the blame upon Congress if prices rose.

"As a result," he said, "both sides, the administration and Congress, are over the barrel."

Meanwhile, Price Administrator Chester Bowles asserted that if Congress prohibits subsidies, "American housewives soon will be paying more for certain important foods."

"The issue is clear," Bowles argued. "There are only two alternatives: a moderate amount of subsidy money to hold retail prices at present levels, or constantly increasing living costs."

about only ten miles short of Cassino.

The enemy, who in recent weeks has seemed consistently to have underestimated the mountain fighting skill of United States troops, apparently fully realized his danger too late.

The Nazis had staked a considerable portion of their available armor in a fruitless struggle in the last three days to halt the tremendous drive that wiped out their Trigono river defenses and now has driven them back to within a mile of the little Sinella river. Their next major stand is likely to be attempted along the Sangro river, fourteen miles above Vasto.

Thus the full year, ending today, since Allied troops landed in North Africa to rid one continent of the Nazis and take a springboard to invade another, found the Germans compelled to abandon plans for holding in Southern Italy with a comparatively small army.

Secrecy Veils Worthington Death

LEWES, Del., Nov. 7 (AP)—A veil of secrecy was drawn today around the Sussex county jail where attractive, twenty-five-year-old Elaine Worthington, whose husband was shot to death under mysterious circumstances early last Thursday, is in custody.

Authorities declined to speak of even the physical condition of Mrs. Worthington who, they said, was too upset to discuss the shooting until yesterday.

It was yesterday that Deputy Attorney General Daniel J. Layton, Jr., quoted the brunette widow and Warrant Officer Carl Moultrie as saying that Moultrie held the pistol which killed his close friend Warrant Officer John H. Worthington.

The official said Mrs. Worthington told him the shooting occurred after her husband accused her, in the bathroom of their luxurious ocean front home, of "intimacies" with Moultrie.

Layton said Mrs. Worthington admitted "a series of intimacies" but that Moultrie, who also is in custody, denied any improper relations.

World Labor Union Urged by Curran
NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (AP)—Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union (N.M.U.), today called for an international labor organization, asserting that "the beginning of a world union of labor is the only guarantee of permanent peace."

Addressing the panel on Soviet trade unions at the Congress of American-Soviet Friendship, he said "much of the misinformation about Russia is due to the sources to which the people have access," and expressed the hope that the United States will get "a truer picture" through present-day communications.

Chaplain Writes Mt. Savage Couple About Missing Son

Describes Bombing Raid to Parents of Sgt. James Murphy, Jr.

MT. SAVAGE, Nov. 7 — Mr. and Mrs. James R. Murphy, Sr., received a letter this week from the Rev. James O. Kincaannon, first lieutenant, concerning their son, Sgt. James Murphy, Jr., who was reported "missing in action" over a month ago.

Sgt. Murphy was a gunner on an army bomber and according to the letter the ships were on a bombing mission over Europe when one of the ships in the unit was hit by flak. The disabled ship crashed into the plane in which Sgt. Murphy was a crew member.

Both ships went down "over or near Heligoland." The chaplain stated further that the day was very cloudy, so that if the men in the ships used parachutes, it would have been impossible to detect them. "If the boys came down safely," the letter goes on, "it is very probable that they were picked up."

Father Kincaannon offers hope to Mr. and Mrs. Murphy by informing them that the intelligence officer of the division stated that over fifty per cent of all crews reported missing in action are safe, either prisoners of war, or trying to get back into Allied territory. In speaking of Sgt. Murphy, the priest says, "he was a fine, outstanding young man—a man of good character, and a good soldier."

'Potomac' Potato Is Christened In Oakland

Miss Fannie Harvey Names Newly Developed Potato at Rotary Meeting

OAKLAND, Nov. 6 — Pientifully using the water from the head waters of the north branch of the Potomac river, obtained in Garrett county, Miss Fannie Mae Harvey, daughter of Earl K. Harvey, one of the large potato producers of this area, christened the new potato developed near here as the "Potomac" at the rural-urban meeting of the Oakland Rotary club last evening at the William-James hotel.

The occasion was attended by thirty-five members of the Rotary club, and a similar number of Garrett county potato producers who were their guests, and a few others.

Highlighting the program was the official naming of the new variety of potato developed on the DeBerry farm north of Oakland during the past several years by Dr. R. A. Jehle, potato specialist, University of Maryland, in cooperation with the extension service. It was the first time Dr. Jehle said that a potato had been so developed worthy of commercial use in this county and was named "Potomac" as symbolic of the entire area.

Yield Is High

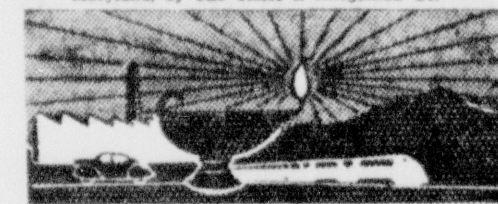

The 1943 yield of this variety was officially placed by Dr. Jehle at 640 bushels per acre with a seven-year average of 372 bushels per acre. He said the tops were resistant to hopper burn and the tops and tubers had resistance to late blight. He said it showed promise of being a most valuable potato for not only general growers but for gardeners or small growers who cannot do a thorough job of spraying. The three-year average for the same variety, unsprayed, was 198 bushels per acre.

The new potato is a cross between the Rural New Yorker and the Katahdin and is the result of potato testing work which has been carried on in this county for eleven years.

W. B. Kemp, acting director of the University of Maryland Experiment Station, spoke briefly on the value of fertilizer applications and pointed out the opportunities for Garrett county potato growers in specializing in seed stocks to furnish other areas, during the postwar era of the future.

A Significant Movement Toward Tax Limitation

IT IS SIGNIFICANT that as many as fourteen states of the nation have taken official action toward adding a new amendment to the federal constitution putting a ceiling on federal taxation. Such action by thirty-two of the states would force Congress to call a constitutional convention to consider the proposal.

There ought to be a tax limitation somewhere in view of the unbridled and wanton imposition of taxes here and there, and the proper place to impose it is in the organic law so that it can be placed beyond the whims and vagaries of perennial legislative bodies. West Virginia a number of years back recognized this principle and placed a property tax limitation in its constitution, a device that has operated well there and relieved property owners of unbearable burdens.

The movement among the states for such a federal amendment cannot give much weight to the warning made in this connection that the device of amending the constitution to bring about needed reforms should be used sparingly for the reason that it has not been freely used.

There is no getting around the fact that here is a movement gathering force toward an objective which is both sound and popular, namely, the lightening of a tax load which threatens paralysis and social upheaval.

Those who would prefer to see the objective brought about through a new process of budgeting by Congress recognize that fact and are free to say that if a constitutional amendment is the only way to check the irresponsible forces which claim to "liberalism" seem justified only by their liberality with other people's money, then the amendment should be had. Congress doesn't seem to be able to effect the reform, and the history of the last decade has certainly attested the need of it.

Overtime Doesn't Worry Wallace

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES provides that "the vice president shall be the president of the Senate." He is expected to preside and vote in the event of a tie. For that specified duty, he is paid regularly every month by Uncle Sam at the rate of $15,000 a year.

But, in the first six weeks after Congress reassembled September 14, on the occasions when the presiding officer of the Senate was called upon to act, Mr. Wallace was present about thirty per cent of the time.

Perhaps the vice president is on a one-man sit-down strike.

Or perhaps he has his own ideas that the framers of the constitution didn't think of as to what he is being paid for.

And, just maybe, he knows there is an election coming up next year and he has started the New Deal's shopping early—war or no war.

Whatever the good Henry has in his mind, he has made pikers out of all of our past vice presidents who were customarily caricatured as asleep at their post.

The Relationship Of Jobs and Taxes

THE GREAT MAJORITY of the public, including those in public office, have indicated their desire that free enterprise rather than government supply jobs after the war.

This is all well and good, but it takes more than saying to accomplish. Industry has emphatically accepted the task of keeping production at a high level during peacetime. It knows that production would mean more goods, jobs, and a higher standard of living.

However, more and more people are also coming to realize that industry cannot possibly plan for expanded production after the war if it continues to be taxed to its very utmost. For one thing, business must have capital invested in it—and people who have suffered tremendous income taxes will be loath to risk what is left in any business which will yield little profit after its taxes have been deducted.

And if private enterprise does not supply employment, government will surely step in. This means vast public works programs, to be paid for by taxes.

Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and author of the pay-as-you-go income tax, has come forth with a practical suggestion. He proposes that instead of letting high taxes to keep a large public works program going, taxes should be reduced after the war so that money can be left for individuals to invest in industry.

To those who really want to see private industry embark on a full production program after the war and provide the bulk of employment, the logic of this recommendation is apparent. It is a businessman's way of putting the horse before the cart.

Russian Victories Helped by Allies

RUSSIAN VICTORIES have brought the German armies to the most desperate situation they have faced at any time since the beginning of the war. They are facing the collapse of the whole Russian enterprise and a disaster which will demonstrate to the world, including the people of the Reich, that Germany stands now exactly where it stood a quarter of a century ago.

The possible consequences of military reversals in Russia must fill the mind of the fuhrer with dismay. Unless the merciless drive of the Red army can be checked, the Germans face the certainty of complete disaster in Russia this winter.

The allies of Russia have not been negligible factors in the transformation wrought in the military situation along the eastern front. Not only were there vast direct shipments of war materials to Russia, but British and American bombers, bent upon the destruction of Germany city by city and town by town, have drawn the bulk of the Nazi air force away from the Russian front. They are in this thing to the finish, which can come only with the unconditional surrender of the enemy.

Why Congress Flounders Over a Tax Measure

CONGRESS would not be floundering so badly on drafting a new tax bill if the representatives and senators could justify even to themselves the necessity for many more billions of new taxes. If all the new billions were to go for purely war purposes, Congress would not be hesitating and pawing ground. There would be no question about raising tax rates.

But Congress realizes all too well how much money is being poured down the vast and gaping maw of the huge bureaucratic machine set up by the New Deal—a giant bureaucracy which has nothing to do with the war and which harbors thousands of employees on the federal pay roll.

Congressmen went back home this summer and felt the public's pulse. What they felt and what they heard disturbed and frightened them. The people back home are fed up with bureaucracy. Congress knows well how much money bureaucracy costs.

And so the members are floundering over a new tax bill because they do not know how to justify it. They know where the people's money has been going. Guilt prods them to do the right thing, but fear holds them back.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

When young Howard Handelman went up to the Aleutians to cover the war for the International News Service, his boss told him to keep a full diary of everything that happened to him, regardless of how much spot copy he was able to send out. Fortunately the young correspondent took the advice and the harvest is rich in his book "Bridge to Victory" (Random House)—which ranks with Tregaskis's "Guadalcanal Diary" and Lawson's "Thirty Seconds over Tokyo" as the best books the Browser has read about this war and how common human beings are fighting it.

The author's very youth and inexperience are precious qualities in his approach to the grim war in the North; they give sharpness and precision to his observation. And the boys whom he describes are also young and new to war and everything they do is something not one of them ever did before. So the whole effect of the book is grimly, starkly realistic.

Handelman lived through last winter with these lads on the muddy, windy, cold island of Amchitka. He flew with the fliers, walked with the infantry, chummed with the engineers—and he was one of them when he went out to Attu with the first wave.

So he makes the ghastly battle for Attu live on every page. The most tremendous chapter in the book is his description of the horrible night in Chicago Valley when more than a thousand Japanese made a wild night attack on the Americans, determined to kill as many of our boys before they killed themselves. They destroyed their stores, put to death their wounded, and ran wildly toward death. The result was something no American soldier can understand, the spectacular climax of the battle for Attu.

Here's a delightful book! It's "Where's Sammy?" by Sammy Schulman, who has been a top news photographer for a decade and a half. Sammy has photographed kings and popes and murderers and dying men, political conventions (with Arthur Brisbane passing him the flashlight bulb) and bombs dropping on little African towns. Sammy is both tough and gentle. Tell him he can't take a picture—and he takes it. Only once, as far as his story tells it, did he ever have a chance at a great news-shot—and fail to take it. That was when he raised his camera to photograph Lindbergh as he came away from identifying his dead baby—and decided not to do it.

Here's a lively, earthy, fascinating and delightful story of what Sammy-with-a-camera has done in these last twenty years. History in the making, through the eyes of an interesting little man who went to Africa with our troops and hitchhiked an airplane ride back with Admiral King. . . . You'll like it. Anybody would.

But the Browser can't say as much for Curt Martin's "Hills of Home" (Houghton Mifflin), a series of sketches of life in a little Mexican town, as lived by young John Fellows. It is supposed to portray the youth of an ordinary American boy—"the man in khaki you just passed on the street"—and it is a sensitive and poetic picture. But not the country life the Browser once knew. It has a dreamlike charm but its truth is over-sentimentalized.

William Morrow and Company offer a prize of $15,000 for the best book-length manuscript for girls between 8 and 15—written by currently active librarians. That's about enough for Marsh Maslin.

Latest Victory Over Japs Shows Sea Power Need

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Sea power and air power were put into proper perspective this week in the Southwest Pacific in one of the finest demonstrations of unified command and teamwork by our army and navy that has been witnessed thus far in the war.

The story has been told backward in the official communiques due to the fact that news of air action came before news of the naval battle. But here is what happened:

1. An American naval task force protected the landings of our marines on Bougainville Island and bombarded the coast defenses.

2. Having landed their forces successfully, the navy turned northward to meet a Japanese task force whose presence had been detected by airplane reconnaissance. All was in readiness to meet the Japanese naval units.

3. The Japanese came down the coast without interference by any American air force and were engaged early last Tuesday in a three-hour battle in the thick of night. It was an old-fashioned naval slug-fest, from which we emerged victorious and the Japanese fleet turned in flight, leaving at least one cruiser and four destroyers sunk and other units badly damaged.

No Ships Lost

4. At dawn, the Japanese sent dive bombers to attack our naval units which were only slightly damaged. No ships were lost in either the sea or air battle.

5. The fleeing Japanese warships got to Rabaul harbor in time to suffer a most devastating blow by Lieut. Gen. Kenney's air force operating under Gen. MacArthur's command. Three destroyers were sunk and damage was done to other units of the Japanese naval force, including at least one heavy cruiser.

Those extremists who have been willing to abolish navies, so to speak, and let the war depend on air forces alone have not yet been able to abolish the night hours of the clock. Air power except in rare cases is unable to do any fighting at night in naval actions in the open sea, and that is why most of the important naval battles in the Southwest Pacific thus far have been fought at night time. The Japanese last year sank three of our cruisers—the Vincennes, the Quincy and the Astoria—as well as an Australian cruiser, Canberra, in a night action near Guadalcanal, and one of the most decisive battles for the possession of the Solomons which we won in November, 1942, was also a night engagement.

Navy Essential for Landings

Air power can detect the approach of enemy vessels if air bases are available or if air carriers are at hand, but the actual landing operations and the ability of an army to keep possession of ports where troops have been landed depends on sea power.

In the battle off Bougainville this week we apparently did not have air bases near enough to send up planes to prevent the Japanese fleet from coming down to threaten our bridgeheads or to take any toll of the approaching Japanese units after we had successfully landed our marines. If we possessed aircraft carriers in sufficient quantity to assist every task force, the story might have been different. But even the aircraft carriers would have been of little avail during a night action.

The steady progress of the American armed forces in the Solomons area has been due to the presence of adequate sea power which since a year ago has kept the Japanese from landing re-enforcements in sufficient number to threaten our holdings or to stop our offensives.

Air Protection Effective

But the presence of air power in Gen. MacArthur's area, on the other hand, has certainly dealt successive blows at Japanese shipping and concentrations of war vessels, and thus prevented the Japanese from developing their air attacks in sufficient strength to destroy our ships.

Nazi Blitz Is Outmoded by New, Swift Gun-Tank System Evolved by Russians

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The first cold, detailed military accounts of Russian fighting are beginning to come through.

They show a picture of tactical skill and power developed by the Russians so far beyond accepted military practices that it probably will constitute a basis of all military texts for a generation to come.

It is far ahead of the German blitz which so recently revolutionized warfare, although it evolved from that, as the answer and counter-stroke. If the Germans had the blitz, the Russians have a zitz.

Its one dominant characteristic is that it is indefinable and, therefore, yet unable to be matched. You cannot learn it from textbooks, none of which has yet been written.

The Russians are working and reworking it out from experience in stopping and then counter-attacking the blitz system of breaking through a military line with tanks and armored units, to circulate swiftly in the rear of the enemy and demoralize resistance (France, Poland).

Artillery Plays Big Part

Strangely, it relies mainly on motorized artillery guns and tanks to the declining use of planes and foot soldiers. Probably the Nazi dive bombing idea cannot be employed widely because the Russian system of penetrations and pocket indentations is so swiftly changing that the battle line not only runs like a constantly wriggling snake, but perhaps is indistinguishable from the air.

The basis of initial attack is the concentration of big guns. The Reds have used 150 to a kilometer. These, concentrated upon particular points in the Nazi lines, literally have blasted them out of existence. Through the gap, tanks pour.

At critical points, constructed second, third, fourth and even fifth lines, each screened by mine fields in front, and each spaced about four miles apart, just at the end of the Russian effective artillery range from one line to another.

In short, the Nazi defense line against the Russian made is sometimes twenty miles wide. The Reds must penetrate this distance in order to break through.

New Swift Attack

Naturally, they seldom do, as the Germans start counter-attacks driving counter-pockets into the Russian lines when they can on either side of the gap. So the Russians have worked out the swiftest system for abandoning their attacks, simultaneously starting another attack at wholly different points.

On one occasion, their plan of attack called for five alternative attacks at different sections of the line, and not until the fifth were they able to break through to find weak second and third German lines for an appreciable advance.

This kind of warfare makes for a mechanized melee. The carnage is terrific. The Russian guesses on Nazi losses runs from 22,000 to 33,000 per day—that is more than two whole divisions, killed to a man in a day's fighting, lost generally in these pockets and counter-pockets along the 700 mile battlefield.

Unprecedented Warfare

The Russian announcements sometimes reflect the Slavonic dramatic temperament more than the cold military situation, but any overstatement in these official guesses cannot alter the conclusion that this is war such as man never seen before and the mind of man has never before contemplated.

The method of each attack varies primarily on the lay of the land. Indeed, in forests, both the Reds and Nazis used the old fashioned Indian tactics, hiding regiments of sharpshooters in trees where tanks and big guns were useless. The only rule, apparently, is that there are no rules.

The Russian general staff will call off an attack in a minute and start another, even though commitments of thousands of men and much material have been made with enemy lines and must be left. No sentiment favoring personal methods of generals or the lives of men and the value of materials is apparent.

Germans Outnumbered

Best of the accounts so far is in the Field Artillery Journal for November in an article by the esteemed Col. Conrad Lanza. He estimates Russian strength in action September 15, is approximately 4,500,000 men, outnumbering the Germans thirty percent.

He says German resistance began September 1. He also predicted the Germans could not keep the Dnieper line, because they could not defend it.

Apparently, the strategic importance of rivers and natural obstacles is vanishing in this new type of fighting.

To bring the report up to date: Doubts are being expressed because the Russians did not take Kiev. That is only an example of their strategy. Meeting stout resistance at Kiev, they headed their main attack for southward, from Kremenchug.

Their next attack well may be developed in the north, around Nevel, straight toward Moscow, and head straight toward Latvia and Riga, to relieve Leningrad.

Something like that certainly will develop if German resistance at the southern end of the line gets too strong.

The Assault On Insurance

From the New York Herald Tribune

In a report just prepared for the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, the insurance committee urges that body to "memorialize Congress to protect the principle of local self-government and to legislate that nothing in the Sherman or Clayton acts shall be construed as applying to the insurance business."

This proposal stems from current attempts of the department of Justice to bring the insurance companies under the anti-trust laws. For ninety years insurance has been regulated by the states, each of which has acted to meet its own local conditions. Up to now the supreme court has always taken the position that insurance was not commerce and, therefore, not subject to federal regulation. In August of last year, however, the federal Anti-Trust division announced a nationwide criminal investigation of the fire-insurance business and obtained indictments against 188 companies in the district court, Atlanta, in August of this year that court reviewed the authorities, held that the anti-trust laws did not apply to insurance and dismissed the indictments. The government promptly appealed to the United States supreme court, which has consented to review the lower court's decision.

The business of fire insurance has been the subject of many years of study and experimentation by the states, which, among them, have produced a general and well established pattern of regulation. Back of this pattern of regulation lies the basic philosophy that uncontrolled competition in the insurance field is undesirable, since it favors the strong companies against those less strong and since companies which write at rates violating the law of averages are inviting insolvency for themselves and financial losses for their policy holders.

There are many who believe that this attack on the insurance companies is simply the newest of a long series of back-door attempts by the New Deal administration to reduce the sphere of state's rights. Whether this is the case or not, we agree with the Conference of State Governors that Congress itself should settle this issue of insurance regulation. This it can do by a vote on the Van Nuys-Bailey bill, which is a simple affirmation that nothing in the Sherman or Clayton acts is to be construed as applying to the insurance business.

Missouri Studies Plan To Streamline Its Government

By DON DOANE

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—Missouri's constitutional convention is proving to be a hotbed of ideas for state government reform. Most of them seek to "streamline" the state's complicated governmental structure or to take politics out of its administration.

Ordered by the voters last November to revise Missouri's sixty-eight-year-old constitution, the convention in its first month of session has received such proposals—revolutionary in this state—as:

1. A one-house legislature.
2. A cabinet form of administration with only one or two elected officials.
3. Non-partisan election of legislators.
4. A streamlined judiciary shorn of hundreds of minor courts.
5. Simplified county government with as few as four—instead of eight or more elected officials.

Party Basis Now

Missouri's government, only slightly altered since the constitution of 1875, now has five officials besides the governor, a 150 member House of Representatives and a thirty-four member Senate, all elected on a political party basis.

From this framework has been hung a patch-work of eighty-two unco-ordinated boards, bureaus, commissions and departments. The idea of simplifying that complicated structure is prominent in amendments proposed by the eighty-three convention delegates.

Stratford Lee Morton, Clayton Republican, offered the most complete streamlining plan—and also the most completely non-partisan proposals. He would elect only a governor, who would appoint an administrative manager and twelve department heads. He would take politics out of the patronage by putting all their employees under civil service.

Unifamiliar Legislature

Two forms of unicameral legislature were proposed, both much like the Nebraska plan, with a single law-making body of not more than seventy-five members. Morton offered one of them, and here again he followed through on his non-partisan theory by proposing to elect legislators "on a separate ballot bearing no party label."

The county governments—and even the courts—would be streamlined by some of the proposals. There are 114 counties in Missouri, and even the smallest of them are burdened with at least a dozen elected officials. One delegate offered a method for several counties to consolidate. Another proposed limiting small counties to four officials, with not more than six for any counties except those containing large cities.

State Court Council

One new court plan, backed by the State Bar Association and Judicial Conference, would eliminate the hundreds of justice of the peace courts and set up an administrative council to supervise and co-ordinate all state courts. Missouri's supreme and appellate judges already are under a non-partisan plan of appointment.

The convention, which some members expect to spend nearly a year fitting these proposals into a new constitution, is composed of forty-two Democrats and forty-one Republicans—with the extra Democrat approved of both parties.

Under the present constitution, the question must be submitted to the voters every twenty years: "Shall there be a convention to revise the constitution?" Last November voters said "yes." They voted likewise in 1922. But they adopted seven minor amendments of the twenty-two convention submitted.

Anything this convention adopts must run the same hazards at the polls before it becomes the state's new supreme law.

ject to federal regulation. In August of last year, however, the federal Anti-Trust division announced a nationwide criminal investigation of the fire-insurance business and obtained indictments against 188 companies in the district court, Atlanta, in August of this year that court reviewed the authorities, held that the anti-trust laws did not apply to insurance and dismissed the indictments. The government promptly appealed to the United States supreme court, which has consented to review the lower court's decision.

The business of fire insurance has been the subject of many years of study and experimentation by the states, which, among them, have produced a general and well established pattern of regulation. Back of this pattern of regulation lies the basic philosophy that uncontrolled competition in the insurance field is undesirable, since it favors the strong companies against those less strong and since companies which write at rates violating the law of averages are inviting insolvency for themselves and financial losses for their policy holders.

There are many who believe that this attack on the insurance companies is simply the newest of a long series of back-door attempts by the New Deal administration to reduce the sphere of state's rights. Whether this is the case or not, we agree with the Conference of State Governors that Congress itself should settle this issue of insurance regulation. This it can do by a vote on the Van Nuys-Bailey bill, which is a simple affirmation that nothing in the Sherman or Clayton acts is to be construed as applying to the insurance business.

IT'S QUALITY... NOT TRIMMINGS... that counts today

You've doubtless noticed that your laundry bundles don't LOOK quite as fancy today as they did in pre-war days. This is done to cut down on costs, paper and the time involved. However, if you look over the laundry job itself, you'll find that you're getting the same, complete service you've always gotten from us. We know that you understand the reason for this and we also know that you would rather sacrifice trimmings than quality in your laundry work.

WITH GUNS LOADED, ready to fire, Dan Duryea, Humphrey Bogart and Bruce Bennett (from left to right) jump from their tank anxious to come to grips with the enemy in this scene from the Columbia thriller "Sahara." The epic drama, which opens an engagement Thursday at the Maryland theatre, is concerned with the adventures of an American tank and her crew during the flaming struggle for El Alamein.

little things, like buying cigars for the judge, and the gold chain and locket he gave her the first year she had worked for him. And the watch on her wrist, which was his gift on her twenty-first birthday. She remembered the little bags of candy that he bought her after he had been irritable with her. She remembered his eyes the day he saw through her grief. And for the first time she thought, "What shall I do if he dies?"

Another thought followed swiftly upon the heels of her mental question. "Would I have been content to stay here until I am old?"

A shiver ran over her. The telephone rang again and when she picked it up and answered it, her face paled a little.

It was the hospital calling. Judge Mayfield wanted to see her. Would she hurry?

She could have five minutes with him, the nurse told her. No longer. Already he had a shrunken look. His great, once-ruddy cheeks were sunken, gray, and when he spoke it was in a hoarse whisper, but with his old spirit.

"Think I'm going to die, Beth. I'm not—not yet. Got a few things to do."

"Don't say anything you don't have to," she pleaded, holding his cold hand in her two warm ones. "Can I do anything for you?"

Theaters Quarantine Aids Rookies on Leave Soldiers on leave, stranded in a house with six beautiful girls by a scarlet fever quarantine, form the hilarious basis for romance and comedy in RKO Radio's laugh riot, "The Adventures of a Rookie," starting today at the Liberty theatre.

A brand-new comedy team, Wally Brown and Alan Carney, along with romantic hero Richard Martin, are snatched out of civilian life by the draft. They're just getting the hang of trainee life when their first leave is granted, and heroine Margaret Landry invites them to a party at her house.

That's when the quarantine situation develops, and by the time the scarlet fever turns out to be strawberry rash and the boys are released, they've lost their regiment. Their subsequent adventures are a frantic attempt to overtake and rejoin it, with scenes on a bus, a dock at San Francisco and elsewhere.

Judy Canova Stars In Maryland Comedy

Rakish comedy is the order of the day at the Maryland theatre where Republic's latest Judy Canova starring vehicle, "Sleepy Lagoon," opened yesterday for a three-day engagement.

Miss Canova is in a class by herself, with no imitators, and her performance in "Sleepy Lagoon" is strictly on the Canova beam, with a chuckle or an outright laugh in every line of dialogue.

The locale of the picture is a small town of a type very familiar to us today. Peaceful and calm under ordinary circumstances, it is now deluged with a flood of defense workers who must be entertained and kept happy in their hours of relaxation.

Saloons and gambling houses, operating unbridled, have been sapping the workers' hard-earned money to a deplorable degree and there is much clamor for a reform in the city administration.

An all-femme reform ticket is headed by Judy Joyner, lively and muscular young radio personality whose voice is heard nightly over the local radio station's waves.

Philadelphia, Nov. 7 (AP)— The Washington Redskins, fought to a standstill by the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh combine, nevertheless took a long stride toward the Eastern division championship today as the two teams battled to a 14-14 tie before an all-time Philadelphia record crowd of 28,893 for a National Football League game.

Each team had to overcome a one-touchdown deficit. Philadelphia scored first on the unbeaten Redskins, Larry Cabrelli running twenty-five yards with an intercepted pass. Minutes later, Slinging Sammy Baugh connected on his only touchdown pass of the day, and Washington went ahead in the fourth quarter when Lou Rymkus turned a blocked kick into a touchdown, but a pass from Roy Zimmerman to Ernie Steele, who ran fifteen yards to complete a thirty-five yard gain, matched that score, and the Eagles started off Washington's last minute touchdown bid.

Baugh, who had set a league record last Sunday by passing for six touchdowns against Brooklyn, completed fifteen out of thirty aerials today but most of them were short-gain plays and his total yardage was only 147.

A spiraling punt by Zimmerman that went out of bounds on the Washington four set the stage for the Eagles' first score. The second came after Washington's fourth period kickoff, which Bob Thurbon returned to his forty-five. Two Zimmerman passes, to Tony Bova and Steele, negotiated the remaining fifty-five yards.

Washington matched the Eagles' first score in the second period after a partially blocked Zimmerman punt was returned to the Phil-Pitt thirty-five, and Baugh passed from his twenty-five to Wilbur Moore, racing alone across the end zone. The second score came after a fifteen-yard penalty set the Eagles back to their seven, where Bob Masterson stormed in to block Zimmerman's punt and Rymkus grabbed the rolling ball on the four and crawled over the goal line on all fours.

The game was even most of the way, first downs standing eleven to ten with Washington ahead. The Redskins had more scoring chances, however, missing two field goal attempts and spending most of the last five minutes inside the Phil-Pitt forty with Baugh passing desperately but unsuccessfully for a winning score. The score:

WASHINGTON	0	7	0	7-14
PHIL-PITT	0	7	0	7-14

Washington scoring: Touchdowns: Moore, Rymkus. Points after touchdowns: Masterson, 3 (placements). Phil-Pitt scoring: Touchdowns: Cabrelli, Steele (sub for Rymkus). Points after touchdowns: Zimmerman, 2 (placements).

St. Paul's Squad Has Six Veterans

St. Paul's Lutheran church cagers are hard at work under the direction of Manager R. Harold Fearer and Coach Cliff Fearer preparing for the Central Y.M.C.A. Church Basketball League season, which will start early next month.

The squad of sixteen boys includes six holdovers from last season. George Posselt and Kenneth Cabbage were regulars in 1942-43 while Herman Myers and Mervin Cox were first-string reserves. James Hunter and Roy Merritt are others with experience.

Newcomers include Robert Twigg, Kenneth Wilson, William Linn, Sammy Ford, Donald Lily, Lewis Kohler, Stanley Bishop, John Sprow, Ronald Catlett and Charles Hamaker.

Myers, Cox, Hunter and Bishop are members of local scholastic football squads and probably won't be able to settle down to regular drills until after Thanksgiving.

St. Paul's cagers hold three practice sessions weekly. They drill on Mondays at 5:30 at the "Y" and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5 to 6 at the state armory. Coach Fearer will try to schedule a couple of practice games before St. Paul's takes to the court for its loop opener. New red and white uniforms have been purchased for the squad.

Boston College Rout Rome Army Air Base

BOSTON, Nov. 7 (AP)—Eddie (The Brain) Doherty perpetrated another masterpiece of ball handling black magic today as he sparked his informal Boston college eleven to a 64-0 rout of the Rome, N. Y., Army Air Base football team.

Doherty collected two of his team's ten touchdowns with dazzling run-backs of forty-two and fifty-eight yards after intercepting Rome aerials and whipped a thirty-seven yard spiral to Halfback Jim Cahill for a third.

tussle Friday night. The Keyser Tornado, Potomac Valley Conference champion, topped the Moorefield (W.Va.) High Yellow Jackets, 7-0, last Friday in Moorefield's closing contest. The victory was the fifth against one tie for Keyser in the conference and the Tornado's only loss was to Fort Hill in its last-lifter.

Romney High's Pioneers also completed an undefeated conference season last Friday, turning back the Ridgeley High Blackhaws, 26-13, in the latter's finale, but since both Romney and Keyser have a tie on their records, the Tornado captured the crown by carding one more conference tussle than the Pioneers.

Fort Hill, idle last week, will swing back into action Saturday, meeting Hagerstown here in a game which will go far toward deciding the Cumberland Valley Athletic League title.

Hagerstown Takes CVAL Lead

Hagerstown took the lead last week by thumping the Handley High Judges, 27-6, at Winchester, Va., for its third straight CVAL triumph. Fort Hill, with a record of six consecutive wins, holds CVAL victories over Martinsburg and Handley, Martinsburg, like Allegany, played a non-loop tussle last week. The Bulldogs trimmed the Charles Town Purple Panthers for the second time this season, 27-0.

Allegany will also be in action Saturday and will have a tough afternoon at Martinsburg unless it displays a much better brand of ball than it did against LaSalle. The Bulldogs, seeking their first CVAL victory, are always tougher on their home field.

In another contest down for Friday, Romney will ring down the curtain by opposing the Handley Judges at Winchester, Va.

Trojans Have Committed Total of 38 Miscues in Seven Games

By FRANK FRAWLEY

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7 (AP)—It took quite a bit of unconscious planning for Southern California's Trojans to build up to the point where they could blow a perfect season football record to an inspired but hardly comparable San Diego Naval Training Station outfit.

Unbeaten, untied, unscored-on, the Trojans took a 10 to 7 pasting last Saturday just as many unbiased and uninterested observers predicted they might do. They did it the easiest way, by fumbling at critical junctures. At least seven promising scoring drives were stalled by loose ball handling.

The statisticians took a look at the record books after the men of Troy had fumbled away the ball eight times and discovered Coach Jeff Cravath's boys had committed thirty-eight such miscues in seven games. The answer is simple enough. Up to two weeks ago the Trojans acted like a first class college team.

Then the marines called up officer candidates and four stars, Mickey McCordie, the quarterback, and spangplug of the attack included, were yanked from the squad. Flesche in ball handling went along, too.

Today the Trojans are just another football team. Last week they looked very bad in beating California, 13 to 0. Saturday they were unsure of themselves. Generalship was bad, and the ball handling—well, Cravath said it was the worst he had ever seen in his years of coaching.

The defeat probably didn't change the Rose bowl picture which still looks like a playoff between Southern California, Southern division winner, and the Washington Huskies, unbeaten in the north.

Notre Dame Fans Can Relax; Lujack Proves His Worth

Bertelli's Successor Completes Half of 16 Passes as Irish Win

By HAROLD CLASSEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (AP)—If you are a Notre Dame alumnus, real or synthetic, and are worried about the football team now that Johnny Lujack has replaced the transferred Angelo Bertelli at quarterback, forget it.

If you are coaching the Great Lakes, Northwestern university or Iowa Seashaw colleges, and think that the Irish may be softer because of Lujack's presence, stop it. And if you are just a casual football fan and are doubtful that the Notre Dame outfit, called the game's greatest in some quarters, can keep that ranking with the erstwhile sub as boss, quit it.

Because John (Luj) Lujack is good. The eighteen-year-old youngster made his debut as starting quarterback for the Irish Saturday in their 26 to 0 victory over Army in New York before some 76,000 fans and completed eight of sixteen passes for 176 yards, hit his target in the end zone twice for touchdowns, banded over another personally and played a full sixty minutes of rugged football.

His generalship was satisfactory even to Coach Frank Leahy, a man hard to please, and Lujack's defensive ability brought recognition from Lt. Col. Earl Blaik, coach of the Cadets.

Purdue Remains Unbeaten

While the Ramblers were tackling the seventh straight victory on their record, Purdue remained undefeated by scoring in the final forty seconds by beating Minnesota, 14 to 7; Michigan, Navy, Northwestern, Duke, Texas, A. and M., Georgia Tech and Dartmouth all triumphed handsomely but Southern California was spilled by San Diego Naval and its own errors, 10 to 7.

Little Harold Hamberg brought Navy its 24 to 7 victory over Pennsylvania with Bob Odell getting the lone Quaker counter. Ott Graham virtually was Northwestern's entire offense in downing Wisconsin, 41 to 0; Elroy Hirsch engineered Michigan's 23 to 6 win over Indiana and Don Kasprzak was Dartmouth's big gun in the 47 to 13 victory over Columbia.

Eddie Prokop and his Georgia Tech mates stopped Louisiana State's bowl boom, 42 to 7, while Texas A. and M. blanked an out-manned Southern Methodist aggregation, 22 to 0. Duke, despite the loss of a horde of naval trainees, trounced North Carolina State, 75 to 0.

There were other surprises in Saturday's results in addition to the Trojan setback. Texas Tech blazed for twenty-eight points in the final quarter to down Texas Christian, 40 to 20; Villanova surprised Princeton, 45 to 22, and Brown nosed Yale, 21 to 20, on the two points gained from a safety.

It was a dreary weekend in the Hawkeye State. Illinois spoiled Iowa university's homecoming, 19 to 10; Missouri gave the same treatment to the Iowa State Cyclones before returning alumni, 25 to 7, and Doane college shined Drake from the unbeaten list, 12 to 6.

Irish Invade Evanston

Oklahoma kept pace with Missouri in the Big Six by downing Kansas, 26 to 13, while Tulsa found Oklahoma A. and M. easy, 55 to 6. Ohio State approached that score in drubbing Pittsburgh, 46 to 6.

Wake Forest caught the North Carolina Pre-Flight outfit in the midst of its re-organization and won, 20 to 12, and North Carolina mastered South Carolina, 21 to 6.

Notre Dame invades Evanston this week for its annual tussle with Northwestern before closing out its schedule against the Great Lakes Sailors and the Seashaws. Michigan bumps into hapless Wisconsin and Missouri entertains Oklahoma for the Big Six crowd.

Army may have another rough afternoon with the Sampson Naval Station club, coached by Mal Stevens, and Navy comes to New York for a workout against Columbia. Penn entertains North Carolina while Georgia Tech charges into New Orleans for Tulane's scalp.

Southern California bumps into March Field, generally regarded as a stronger team than the San Diego outfit. Texas and Texas A. and M. prep for their Thanksgiving day meeting by playing Texas Christian and Rice, respectively.

DETROIT, Nov. 7 (AP)—In rain and mud, the Detroit Lions and New York Giants played to a scoreless tie today in a National Football League game before 16,992 spectators. Detroit had three field goal attempts and New York had one as neither team got inside the fifteen-yard line.

Middies, Winners Over Penn, Face Two More Games

Card Will Be Completed with Columbia Saturday, Army November 27

By WILLIAM O. VARN

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 7 (AP)—Back on the winning track again with a decisive victory over Pennsylvania's previously undefeated Quakers, Navy's Midshipmen came out of that gridiron struggle in good shape and high spirits, ready today to sharpen their attack for final games with Columbia and Army.

In trouncing by a 24 to 7 score the Pennsylvania team that had battled Army to a 13-14 tie the previous Saturday, the Sailors were far from the smooth attack displayed in five straight wins before their defeat by Notre Dame.

Not until the last two periods did the habitually slow-starting Middies get up steam to smash the undefeated record of the Quakers, and then they seemed to do it the hard way until that final touchdown. There a brilliant forward lateral, Hal Hamberg to Roe Johnston to Hills Hume, completely baffled the Penn eleven, just as it had crossed up Duke's Blue Devils.

The Navy line was nearer early season form—an encouraging sign after its lethargic display against Notre Dame—and thoroughly outplayed and outsmarted Penn.

Hamberg Sparks Middies

Again little Hal Hamberg was the spark that fired Navy and again he turned in an exhibition of personal brilliance, figuring in every Navy touchdown. His twenty-yard pass to Capt. Al Channell on the Penn two-yard line set up the first touchdown and his great forty-eight-yard punt return through the Penn team to the twelve-yard marker made the second one possible.

Hamberg scored the third touchdown himself after Bobby Jenkins and Vic Pinos had battered deep into Penn territory, and his aerial to Johnston on the Penn ten and a subsequent lateral accounted for the fourth score.

For the first time this season Pinos missed the uprights in place-kicks afterward. Prior to the Notre Dame game he had kicked eight straight, and against the Irish he failed to add the extra point was not his, because the ball was fumbled and he never had a chance to kick. Against Pennsylvania he missed all of his four attempts. He made up for that though with a fine exhibition of line smashing that heartened Navy fans.

Jenkins was the leading ground gainer against Penn with eighty-three yards in fourteen tries, with Ben Martin accounting for fifty-five in thirteen attempts and Pinos the same yardage in seventeen efforts. Hamberg carried the ball twelve times for thirty-six yards and Hills Hume eleven times for thirty-five yards.

Altogether the Middies rolled up 300 yards, 244 on the ground and fifty-six in the air. Hamberg tossed only seven passes and completed three for all the overhead gains in a game where Navy's running attack was powerful enough to win.

Penn Held to 52 Yards

The Sailors amassed eighteen first downs against three for Penn, their defense holding the Quakers to only fifty-two yards advance all afternoon, thirty by air and twenty-two on the ground. Penn completed three of nine passes.

Hamberg's punt return to set up the second Navy touchdown and bring them from behind was personal revenge for Bob Odell's interception of one of Hal's aerials to race forty yards for the only Quaker score. As a matter of fact, Odell was a big factor in making the game close in the early periods, his tackling and blocking being outstanding.

Capt. John Wheelchel, Navy head coach, and his staff naturally are looking forward to the battle with Army Nov. 27 at West Point, but tomorrow they have to do quite a bit of work getting the Middies in a frame of mind to lick Columbia in New York next Saturday.

The Struggle of the Bowls

The bowl situation is in something of a haze of a haze. We have received a number of communications from bowl centers, asking advice as to the teams that might be used. This is quite an order. Southern California seems to be well set in regard to the Rose bowl, with Washington or College of the Pacific as probable or possible invaders.

But what about the Sugar bowl at New Orleans, the Cotton bowl at Dallas or the Orange bowl at Miami? The best teams from the southeastern sector include Duke, North Carolina and Georgia Tech.

It is possible that one of these teams might be available. But what opponent can they get from outlying precinct, to give the game an intersectional flavor? It is the intersectional angle that has the bowl promoters a trifle dizzy.

Another Side

The odds are that each bowl will have a first-class engagement. It always happens that way. But no one is sure yet that some strong team today won't be ridden in the next month through navy or marine withdrawals.

They have been picking off the best in the last few days and the chances are that many, many more will be called into war service before we start celebrating another New Year's eve.

It is all quite complicated but the odds are there will be the same number of good bowl games, which, of course should be played for the National War Fund.

This is no time for any commercial bowl enterprise. This is a point that should be completely understood in advance.

The Other Bowls

What about the Sugar bowl, where they have some $2,000 palpitating spectators waiting for the annual New Year's party? The New Orleans choice could be L.S.U., Tulane or Southwestern Institute.

These are all good teams. But what about the opposition? What team can be drawn in that will give the game some semblance of intersectional competition? The Sugar bowl would like to get some team from the north or east. This is not as simple as it used to be. There are few teams from the north or east who have any interest in bowl games.

And there is also the matter of travel and the distance a team has to travel.

Pennsylvania, Dartmouth and Penn State would be worth booking in any bowl contest.

But no one can say they will be able to meet any bowl invitation. The same shadow hangs over the Orange bowl at Miami.

The best teams from the southeastern sector include Duke, North Carolina and Georgia Tech.

It is possible that one of these teams might be available. But what opponent can they get from outlying precinct, to give the game an intersectional flavor? It is the intersectional angle that has the bowl promoters a trifle dizzy.

Bears Turn Back Packers, Avenge Blot on Record

Bruins Win 21-7 and Move within Two Games of Western Title

CHICAGO, Nov. 7 (AP)—The Chicago Bears gained revenge for the only blot on their National Football League record, a 21-21 tie by the Green Bay Packers, by beating the Packers today, 21 to 7, in the slime of Wrigley field before 43,425 damp and chilled spectators.

In passing and running to their sixth straight triumph since that opening day stalemate with Green Bay, the Bears came within two wins of clinching the Western division championship—or one more Bear victory and a Packer defeat would do it.

Sid Luckman again was the mauler or factor in compiling the Chicago margin. He broke a 7 to 7 tie in the third period with a thirty-eight-yard touchdown pass to Harry Clark—Sid's fifteenth scoring aerial of the season—and plunged across the goal from the one-yard line after a seventy-yard Bear march at the start of the final quarter.

Luckman also gave the ball its initial impetus when the Bears scored to catch up with the Packers, 7 to 7, midway in the second period. He completed a lateral to Ray McLean who lived up to his nickname of "Scooter" by scooting sixty-six yards across the goal line.

The Packers stalled sadly in the final two periods to make only one first down and complete but one aerial, after having forced the yard sticks forward ten times in the opening two frames and connecting on five passes.

Don Hutson drew a throw from Tony Canadeo for a forty-five-yard gain in the first period and downed the ball twenty yards from the Chicago goal. Canadeo then ripped off the remaining distance and Hutson's placement put the Packers ahead, 7 to 0. The score:

GREEN BAY	0	7	0	7-14
CHICAGO BEARS	7	0	0	7-14

Chicago Bears scoring—Touchdowns: McLean (for Magnien), Clark, Luckman. Points after touchdowns: Snyder (for Luckman), 3 (placements).

1921, 3-0 in 1925, 7-0 in 1931, 13-7 in 1935 and 9-0 in 1941.

And all those trips were made when you could get on a train without a reservation made the week before and could rent the presidential suite ten minutes after arrival.

Angelo Bertelli played nine games for Notre Dame as a sophomore in 1941 and completed seventy out of 123 passes. Eight resulted in touchdowns.

Teamwork Needed To Speed Victory, Cantrel Declares

Dr. Joseph Cohn Sees War Settled In Palestine Area

Walsh Delivers Eulogy for 11 Members at Legion Memorial Service

Private interests of every American today must be subordinated to the one job of winning the war with the least possible delay, to the end that the sacrifice of our boys be not continued one hour more than necessary, Joseph A. Cantrel, of Chevy Chase, Maryland department membership chairman of the American Legion and chairman of the Maryland Veterans Commission, told an audience which assembled yesterday in the Maryland theater for the first annual memorial service sponsored by Port Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion.

"Every pound of material, every ounce of strength, every heartbeat in our bodies must be placed at the service of the men who are fighting and dying at the front," the speaker declared.

Teamwork is essential. "It will be only by the everlasting teamwork of the fighting front, the industrial front and the home front that this war will be won."

"When we accomplish the destruction of the aggressors it is our purpose to make certain that our nation remains strong. Our successful collaboration with the nations of the world, now so splendidly begun, in the preservation of the peace to come, which will have been brought so dearly, will depend in large measure upon our ability to destroy future would-be aggressors before they can get fairly started. We must never again be caught napping, as we were after winning the last war, only to lose the peace."

Cantrel said that our matured thoughts today are turned in the direction of Arlington National Cemetery and are centered upon the tomb there of the unknown soldier, as we meditate upon sacrifice and thousands of other Americans of our generation have made in beating back the despotic hordes of our war-like Teuton ancestors, when making their bid for domination under Kaiserism.

"Little did we dream that today our sons would be engaged in the terrible task of meeting in the breach a new generation of that same savage beast bent upon sinking his vicious fangs into the hearts of all freedom loving peoples everywhere, to enslave the world under Nazism," Cantrel said.

"And, moreover, never did we dream that day would ever come when from away out there on the far-flung battlefields of this war they would be bringing from among our sons another immortal unknown soldier to share the glories of a grateful nation at Arlington."

"Armistice day for us meant the ceasing of hostilities and it was the occasion of much happiness, joy and justification, and of celebration. There will one day come with unconditional surrender, another armistice in the present war, and this too, for our sons, will be a day of jubilee."

"They will Armistice day and Unconditional Surrender Day, father and son, kith and kin, go marching through the corridors of time hand in hand, through all the ages to come, celebrating their happy events—yet pausing in their happiness, as we do today, tenderly reflect upon and keep forever fresh the memories of our soldier dead."

Walsh Delivers Eulogy

In delivering the eulogy, Attorney General William C. Walsh, said that eleven of the 1943 membership of Port Cumberland Post have answered the final summons.

"The number is too large to permit a detailed description of the many accomplishments and virtues of each of them, and so we simply say of all of them that they were patriotic American citizens who answered the call of duty in the last war by offering their service and their lives for their country. They enjoyed the love and affection of their relatives, of their comrades in the Legion and of their many other friends, and they earned and deserved the respect and admiration of all their fellow citizens," Walsh declared.

The roll call of members who died in the past year was read by Thomas Raymond Farrell, chaplain of the post. They are Walter A. Clay, John C. Coughenour, Patrick J. Fahey, Alton R. Higgins, Charles H. Leonard, Harry O. Preview, John J. Snyder, Charles J. Shaffer, Ralph S. Thomas, David J. Whitmore and Noble P. Weaver.

As each name was called, a uniformed member of Port Cumberland Squadron, Sons of the American Legion, placed a white chrysanthemum in a floral wreath on an altar backstage.

Duke Orchestra Plays

Music was provided by the Duke Memorial Men's Bible Class orchestra, of fifteen members, under direction of Lloyd Rawlings, and the Centre Street Methodist church quartet, comprising Rudolph J. Kompanek, Cletus W. Hartsock, David B. Hightmire and Earl M. Nordmann. A Marian Wilson directed the audience in singing "America," "Nearer My God to Thee" and the "Star Spangled Banner."

The address of welcome was delivered by Daniel P. McMullen, past Maryland department commander of the American Legion. The Scripture and Benediction were pronounced by the Rev. E. G. A. Snider, pastor of United Brethren church, Ridgeley; the invocation by Rabbi Aaron Lefkowitz, of Beth Chayim Congregation, and the Memorial Prayer by the Rev. W. Joyce Russell, of St. Mary's Catholic church.

Opening a three-day "Jew in Prophecy" conference at the First Baptist church here, Dr. Joseph H. Cohn in his address yesterday pointed out that the Scriptures revealed that both events of the last war and of the present conflict point toward a settlement of the war in the Palestinian area in the eastern Mediterranean.

Restoration of the Jews to Palestine was the principal theme of Dr. Cohn who said that in the wars of the past the nations backed against God's plan for that restoration.

He spoke of the invention of T.N.T. by a Jewish chemist in England which was final recourse of the Allies in World War I for use against Germany's liquid fire. Dr. Cohn said that the chemist would accept no pay for his work but had the British promise that Palestine would be given back to his people.

England Backed Down

When the Versailles Treaty was made, he continued, Palestine was mandated to the British and about 600,000 Jews returned. England backed down, however, Dr. Cohn pointed out, when the Arabs protested and immigration was stopped.

Dr. Cohn discussed in great detail the Nazi persecution of the Jews and stated that Hitler has destroyed about three million of them already. Dr. Cohn quoted the thirty-seventh chapter of Ezekiel in the Bible as the basis for his prophecies that God was stirring up the Jews in all lands and would restore them to Palestine.

Uses Scripture As Proof

He cited the thirty-eighth chapter as indicative of where Joseph Stalin would come into the picture. He would be the silent man at the peace table, Dr. Cohn explained, who would demand his share of Poland and in the future go down into Palestine and attempt to take it.

Concerning a Biblical prediction that tanks would be used, Dr. Cohn said that tanks would be abandoned because of lack of fuel and the Russian Cossacks would be the battling fortress for Stalin.

Dr. Cohn returned to New York last night in order to attend another prophetic conference. The conference here will continue with talks tonight and tomorrow night by the Rev. Sanford C. Mills, of Columbus, Ohio. His topics will be "Why Poland Fell" and "Hitler's Doom."

Final plans for the unveiling ceremonies will be made at a meeting of the Allegany County War Memorial committee this evening at 8 o'clock in the city hall council chamber.

Mary Jo Valentine, 10, Is Seriously Injured

The condition of Mary Jo Valentine, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royal Valentine, 246 Humbird street, was still "serious" last night, Allegany hospital attaches said.

The local girl, who was admitted to the hospital in an unconscious condition Saturday afternoon, suffering from a fractured skull and slight abrasions of the legs after she was struck by an automobile while crossing Park street, had not regained consciousness last evening.

According to Detective B. Frank Gaffney, the child was on her way to dancing school and stepped in front of a car driven by Beal Milleson, 113 Oak street. The child was taken to the hospital by Milleson. No charges were placed against the driver.

Billy McCarthy, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar McCarthy, 420 Cedar street, was treated in Memorial hospital Saturday for a fractured left arm, suffered when he fell from a truck near his home, attaches said.

Purple Heart Order Will Close Charter

Deadline Date Is November 15; Ladies Auxiliary Unit Will Be Formed

Mountain Chapter No. 166 of the Military Order of the Purple Heart, yesterday inducted two new members and increased its number of charter members to thirty-six.

George M. Leib, commander, announced following a meeting at the V.F.W. home.

The new members are Charles Milton Stineff, of Oakland, who was wounded in the battle of the Meuse-Argonne, France, and Powhatan J. Snelling, of 625 Maryland avenue, who recently was presented a Purple Heart medal.

The charter of the local chapter will remain open until midnight, November 15 and all those who join by that date will be recognized as charter members.

Members of the local chapter will march with their respective service organizations in the Armistice day parade. Commander Leib said.

Mrs. Mary Kerns, member of Baltimore Unit No. 122, ladies' auxiliary, who now resides in Cumberland, was authorized to assist in organizing a ladies' auxiliary for the chapter here.

Cresaptown Firemen Battle Forest Blaze

The Cresaptown Volunteer Fire Company battled for three hours a stubborn forest fire that burned over thirty-five acres of woods on Haystack mountain near Bowling Green last evening.

The fire fighters, called to assist in putting out the blaze yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, worked under the direction of Forest Warden John Scally.

Ten members, headed by Fire Chief H. A. Lasher, were present.

Caraway Charter

Capt. Robert Ball, commander of The Salvation Army in Cumberland, said he was so happy the other evening that he had a good notion to turn a few handspins on Baltimore street as a means of showing his appreciation.

During the regular weekly song service at the corner of Baltimore and South Mechanic streets a truck turned the corner, came to a halt and the driver handed the captain a bill.

The commander took one look and couldn't believe his eyes when he saw the denomination of the paper money. It was a $10 note.

He admitted, however, he felt kind of shaky for awhile, fearing that the generous contributor might have made a mistake and would return to ask for his change. But he didn't and Capt. Ball is most thankful.

Narrow escapes of the past week: The woman pedestrian on Greene street who just missed being struck by the taxicab that took off from the Washington street hill and made a four-point landing near the water fountain at the corner of Greene and Baltimore streets.

The large passenger bus that swung wide at the corner of Centre and Bedford streets Saturday morning but came to a stop in time to keep from entering the Walsh and McCagh manure.

This was made more exciting because another large passenger bus to the rear came to a sudden halt in time to prevent a collision.

Jeremiah "Babe" Deftbaugh, captain of the South End Fire Department, has this timely tip to offer to housewives:

"Be careful where you place oily rags."

Several blazes in local homes recently have been traced to spontaneous ignition and one fire in particular last week was caused by an oily rag igniting after being tossed into a hamper containing clothes.

Speaking of fires, the blaze that damaged the store at 173 Baltimore street last Thursday at midnight, was the third recorded since 1917, according to Charles S. Catherman, president of the business school which occupies the second and third floors of the building. He has operated a school there for the last twenty-four years but classes still carry on in spite of the two warm receptions given since he became a tenant of the property.

Another fire story comes to us from Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor. Last month one of his friends approached him and inquired if he would be interested in giving a radio talk in connection with the observance of "Fire Prevention Week."

Gibson declined, stating that he knew little about the subject, and urged that a more qualified speaker be recruited for the broadcast on a Saturday evening.

On the following day the first truck rolled up and halted near the Gibson abode on the Braddock road. Yep, you guessed it, there was a fire in the garage.

Discussing the matter the other day, Gibson commented:

"Wouldn't that have been a heluva note if I had accepted the invitation to go on the air to talk fire prevention and then had the fire break out in my garage the following day!"

Maryland's No. 1 winner of prize contests is a Baltimorean named Charles J. Neum, who has just completed $2,500 in war bonds in a contest conducted by a safety razor company. In addition, in the last ten years, he has won a trip to Europe, several trips to Bermuda, a number of automobiles and cash prizes too numerous to mention.

The champion happens to be a brother of Johnny Neum, manager of the Kansas City, American Association, baseball team, who was a basketball and soccer official for Allegany county high school teams back in the early 1920.

Johnny was one of the best liked officials ever sent into Western Maryland by the Playground Athletic League in the days when little Barton high school ruled the roost.

Discussing the telephone business the other day, Joseph H. Cromwell, manager of the Cumberland office of the C. & P. Telephone Company, said he was amazed at the number of lead slugs which find their way into pay stations.

But he expressed the hope that some day an inventor will come up with a contraption that will halt this type of chiseling.

Joe believes that installation of an electric eye that would sound an alarm automatically should the door of the booth and lock in the offender all at the same time, would be of great benefit to the company and of much embarrassment to those who use lead slugs in place of nickels.

Local Students Collect 300,000 Pounds of Paper

Meet about One-fourth of Goal in Contest To Lead Nation in War Effort

Thinking not so much of just bringing a national broadcast to Cumberland, but more of giving every local service man the chance to be proud of his home town's leading the nation in one phase of war effort, local high school students realized about one-fourth of their goal in the paper salvage contest and collected close to 300,000 pounds Saturday, W. Donald Smith, chairman of the salvage committee, stated last night.

Under the direction of Kenneth W. Jackson, Potomac Boy Scout executive, who, Smith stated, did enough work for four or five men, two full cars were loaded and a third is ready for completion tonight. They will all be sent to their destinations before tomorrow after shipping instructions are received from Baltimore.

The collection trucks returned so fast, Jackson said, that the loaders could scarcely keep up with them. The last truckload came in at 7:30 p. m. and the loaders did not stop work until two hours later.

Spot Collections To Be Made

In order to pick up paper that was not put out or was missed by collectors on Saturday, spot collection centers will be set up this week in the west side and north end sections, Smith stated.

Citizens are asked to have the papers tied securely to facilitate loading. Jackson stated that if more had been tied together on Saturday the time required for loading could be cut more than half.

Some difficulty was experienced Saturday with scavengers who went around in private cars before the collection trucks arrived and took magazines from the curbs. Through the prompt co-operation of the police and Radio Station WTBO, however, they were soon stopped, Smith said.

He pointed out that such individuals should realize that they may be depriving a soldier of some vital piece of equipment.

"Borrow" Comic Books

Along a similar line, but showing a different spirit, Jackson said he was amused to see the small boys "borrowing" comic books with the promise that they would put them in this week's collection.

With the rapid organization that took place in the two days' notice given, Smith stated, students should be more than able to place first in the national "Truth and Consequences" contest. There is still a lot of paper in the city, he pointed out, but with a quarter of the campaign goal met in the first day, coming out on top can very easily be the share of the local pupils.

Volunteers will be needed to complete the loading tonight, and the high schools will be contacted today to make plans for the spot collections throughout the week.

Among the thorough women, 200 were referred to the women's organizations in the armed forces. It was revealed that the majority of these filed application with the WAVES.

According to officials of both the USES and the Unemployment Compensation Board, most of the 302 claims being paid are going to persons who have established homes in Cumberland and find it impossible to leave and for whom no suitable employment is available here.

After paying $900 in cash to the victim, two local truck drivers, convicted of an assault charge, were granted their freedom on parole in circuit court Saturday and were warned by Associate Judge William A. Huster that any future infraction of the law would automatically send them to prison.

Charles Meeks, sentenced to three years, and James Roeder, sentenced to eighteen months in the house of correction paid the money to Darrel C. Bishop, of Fairgo, who had petitioned the court to have the prison terms stricken out on condition that he receive some compensation for the injuries he had suffered and loss of work while he was in a hospital.

After the men were sentenced October 26, Bishop retained Edward J. Ryan as counsel to present a petition for paroling his assailants and making them compensate him rather than have them imprisoned, since he had no way to pay his medical bills and "the men in prison couldn't pay."

Rizer Approves Channel Plan of Flood Control

Approval of the channel plan of flood control as established in Johnston, Pa., as a possible solution to Cumberland's problem was given by Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, after a recent visit to the Pennsylvania town.

At Johnston the stream beds were made deeper and the level of the water during floods was lowered and not raised as proposed by various wall plans for Cumberland, Rizer pointed out.

Lawrence W. Malloy, Mt. Savage, posted $10 bond in police court Saturday morning on a charge of careless driving. He was arrested on Greene street by Detective R. E. Flynn and Officer J. C. Stouffer. Officers said he was speeding.

Pvt. Joseph F. Long, 21, ASN 3720913, docketed as living on Henderson avenue, is being held in the city jail for army authorities, who say he has been absent from Brunswick, Neb., since October 11. He was arrested yesterday at the request of army authorities by Detective Flynn and Officers James A. Brown and Stouffer.

Two fires extinguished

East Side firemen extinguished a grass fire in the rear of Grandview terrace yesterday afternoon at 2:27 o'clock. The blaze was extinguished within fifteen minutes.

Only minor damage resulted from a blaze in the Dutch Kitchen, 20 South Lee street, Saturday at 2 a. m. Central and West Side firemen, who were called to the fire, said the blaze started in rubbish under the bar.

849 Former Kelly Workers Referred To Jobs in Area

USES Reports 66 Per Cent of 3,700 Laid Off Offered New Positions

About sixty-six per cent of the 3,700 persons laid off when the Kelly-Springfield company ceased ordnance production and prepared to resume tire manufacturing have been referred to other jobs, according to figures released by the United States Employment Service.

Walter Sondheim, director of the USES and assistant director of the War Manpower Commission, said that it would be impossible to place every Kelly ordnance employee if they consented to leave Cumberland for employment. As it was, 849 of the group were referred immediately to jobs in Cumberland and vicinity.

Not permitted to reveal the particular plants to which employees are referred, the USES released the numbers of workers referred to different localities.

About 100 skilled rubber workers were sent by Kelly-Springfield to a West Haven, Conn., rubber plant until they will be needed when the Kelly gets into full scale tire manufacturing.

Other referrals numbered 890 to Baltimore war plants; 205 to a plane factory in Hagerstown; fifty-two to ordnance manufacturing in Elkhart; seventy-seven to civil service for federal positions and 165 to railroad shops in Cumberland and vicinity.

Among the thorough women, 200 were referred to the women's organizations in the armed forces. It was revealed that the majority of these filed application with the WAVES.

According to officials of both the USES and the Unemployment Compensation Board, most of the 302 claims being paid are going to persons who have established homes in Cumberland and find it impossible to leave and for whom no suitable employment is available here.
